SJCC membership soars

lan M. Sherman, CA Chair of the SJCC Board

It is well known that building the new Jewish Community Centre in Ottawa started as a community dream, an ambitious idea ... a "just imagine"... It is equally well known that if not for the tenacious hard work, dedication and unyielding support of so many community members, this dream would not have become a reality.

Today, the Soloway Jewish Community Centre (SJCC), housed in the Joseph and Rose Ages Family Building, proudly stands at 21 Nadolny Sachs Private as part of that fulfilled dream, a multi-dimensional "community campus". It is embraced by the enduring presence of the Michael and Siby! Greenberg Family Centre for Jewish Learning and the Bess and Moe Greenberg Family Hillel Lodge located inside the Joseph and Inez Zelikovitz Long Term Care Centre.

Despite Herculean efforts and all good intentions, the road to the SICC's success has not been an easy one, fraught with many ups and downs. When the SICC opened its doors in September of 1998, it's membership base was kick-started with a disappointing 940 members; only 200 more members than the Centre had while on Chapel Street. "We built it ... but they did not come."

Undaunted by this initial disappointment and injected with the same tenacity that be ped erect toe building, the executive of the SICC, its board of directors and particularly the staff set out to fulfil: its mission. to build a place where the Ottawa Jewish community could regularly come together, get in touch with their Jewish traditions and increase their connection to Jewish life by belonging to a JCC.

Only slightly more than two years later, that hard work is paying off and things are starting to explode. As of June 1, 1999, the SJCC's membership base totalled 2,661. By April 15, 2000, membership had increased by 31% to 3,492 members. By September 2000, member number 4,000 was signed on, and as of February 28, 2001, the SJCC proudly boasts over 4,500 members representing a 378% increase in less than two and a half years. Almost 90% of the membership is Jewish and actively engaged in many of the programs offered at the Centre.

The SJCC has become a vital hub of activity offering a wide array of Jewish educational, cultural, recreational and social programs and activities for adults, young families, teens, vouths and toddlers. The SJCC's TD Bank Fitness Centre, unrivalled in the Ottawa area. offers cutting-edge equipment and programs to tone your muscles and strengthen your heart. CIRCUMCISION, a human rights issue?

Circumcision – Questioning a cutting-edge practice

By Rabbi Reuven P. Bulka

A few years ago, in the aftermath of a nationally reputed ethicist's charge that circumcision was criminal abuse, the participants in the Ask the Religion Experts" feature in the Ottawa Citizen were presented with a question that reflects the feelings these allegations elicited. The question was: "Does God relish the sexual mutilation of children through the ritual of circumcision?"

The question was obviously hostile. The issue has been raised again, under the guise of concern for human rights. Is there an inherent hostility to religious practice in this latest assault on circumcision? Only the champions of this cause know for sure.

2000 Foundation funds are allocated

A wide variety of educational, charitable and social service agercies in Ottawa and Israel were the beneficiaries of distributions announced by the Ottawa Jewish Community Foundation for the year ended December 31, 2000.

Norman Lesh, president, has announced that the allocations totalied $1,096,412. The Allocations Committee, which is chaired by the president, allocates the income from capital in accordance with the terms of the agreements between the Foundation and its fund holdeers. Contributed capital is retained in the Foundation and only the income is used for local, national and overseas causes.

At the end of the year there were 493 individual funds under administration, an increase of 48 funds over 1999.

Foundation leaders expressed satisfaction with the Foundation's progress during 2000. Lesh conveyed the board's appreciation for the community's generous response to the Foundation's 25th anniversary celebration. He noted that the Foundation's growth reflects the confidence the Foundation enjoys throughout the community.

"The Foundation is the ideal vehicle for donors to link themselves or loved ones in perpetuity through planned charitable giving to the needs and dreams of our community," said Lesh.

The Israel we do not see and hear in the media

VAAD Report

Mitchell Bellman Executive Director Vaad Ha'lr

Editor's note: Mitchell Bellman has recently returned from leading a local contingent on a solidarity mission to Israel. Here is a brief synopsis of this mission.

In the Jerusalem neighbourhood of Giloh, the tension from the conflict between Israel and the Palestinians is probably the most intense. Giloh is the only Jerusalem neighbourhood in direct firing range from a city controlled by the Palestinian Authority (PA). For the last four months, Palestinians in Beit Jalla have been shooting at the homes on Ha'anafa Street in Gilob

Twenty-one people from Ottawa recently participated as part of a group of 165 Canadians in a Solidarity Mission to Israel. Our goal was to show our support for Israelis in this difficult time. Nowhere was our support more appreciated than in Gilob

At a meeting in an elementary school with Grade 5 students and their parents, a father told us that his daughter asked "Who gave them the guns to shoot at us?" The father replied "I did." He supported the Oslo process, the transfer

He believed that these steps were the path to peace and a better future for his daughter. Today, like most Israelis, he is haunted by what went wrong and all he can do is apologize to his child who is living through a nightmare.

Giloh is a regular Jerusalem neighbourhood. The residents moved there because they could find a nice, affordable home. They were not ideological settlers who moved into harms way to declare Israel's sovereignty over the land. They chose Giloh because it was a nice place to live.

When you stand on one side of Giloh, you get a beautiful view of Jerusalem. You can clearly see the Knesset a mere 5 km away. On the other side of the mountain top, you can look across the valley to Beit Jalla and see Bethlehem to the east. While our group was standing on Ha'anafa Street overlooking Beit Jalla and the Israeli army camps, we heard a single gunshot in the valley. Our hearts were pounding as we moved back from the lookout point.

When we turned around we saw the apartments that faced the valley. Residents had filled their balconies with sandbags and covered their windows with rusted sheets of metal ... did whatever they could to protect their families and their homes. While our group had an easy escape from the gunfire, the nightmare of this conflict will continue for the people of Giloh as there is great uncertainty as to whether the new Israeli government will be able to stop the violence. And this is all happening a short walk form Israel's Parliament.

Back at the school, we saw pictures the children had drawn of the Israeli helicopters hovering over their homes of control to the PA, the arming of a Palestinian police force. and shooting at targets in Beit Jalla. We heard about the everyday struggle to maintain a normal life for the children. For example, should parents take their kids to the birthday party of one of their classmates who lives on Ha'anafa Street?

The people in Giloh were genuinely appreciative of our visit. They don't see a lot of tourists these days. In fact, our (Continued on page 3)

Repair, rebuild and rethink with Kallah

Far too many of us associate the Purim holiday with a time for children. However, one of the mitzvot associated with this celebration is the requirement of hearing every word of the Megillat Esther, as it is read from the scroll. The opportunities to make noise may be fun, but that is certainly not the goal. The emphasis is on the careful reading of the book. The Talmud Megillah discusses whether the Book of Esther should be included in the Bible. The rabbis concluded that its message was so very important that not one letter could be missed.

The Jewish community of the far flung Persian empire in the days of Esther and Mordecai was apparently developing well, felt itself quite secure and believed that not much bad could happen to it. In retrospect, we know that Esther, the chief wife of the king, was Jewish and that she was a powerful force when necessary. We were, also, probably well integrated into the commercial and social life of the nation. Essentially, life was good.

To a degree it sounds like the situation in Jewish communities throughout North America and the Diaspora, Israel is a wonderful reality, even with all of its problems. Our traditional worries, especially anti-Semitism, are not our greatest difficulties today. The highest of political, cultural and professional offices are available to us. We are important influences in the economic and intellectual sectors of the nations in which we live.

The problems mentioned in the Megillah, especially our physical annihilation, are not a worry. Yet there are incessant studies and articles suggesting that we are far from healthy. We worry about diminishing birthrates, disaffection from our communities, dwindling numbers of involved people and other problems, all of which paint very unpleasant scenarios. I have been reading them for years and the dire predictions have not materialized. On the other hand, we also know that we have a great deal to do to repair, rebuild and rethink what our future could be. Our ancestors in the

From the pulpit

Persian Diaspora had to defend themselves or else they would have perished. We have a similar task, although our conditions are happily much better. Closing our eyes to the reality is self defeating and accordingly very dangerous.

Our community will join others across North America this month as we discuss the very important issues confronting us as Jews. To facilitate and enhance the process, we are going to be linked via satellite with well-known personalities who will express their opinions and share their insights. At the same time, we will have the opportunity to question and discuss what they are saying through a voice link. The Soloway Jewish Community Centre and the synagogues of Ottawa are joining in this very important effort.

The matter of the direction and the viability of the North American Jewish community will be addressed in a program called Kallah. The opening segment will feature lawyer andprofessor Alan Dershowitz; well-known writer Anne Roiphe, who has been making her own journey back to Judaism; and Dennis Prager, who, for years, has challenged many of us with his writings and his lectures. I urge you to be part of the audience during these discussions on where we are going.

The opening segment will be on Sunday, March 11 at 7:30 pm, at the Soloway Jewish Community Centre. Two more presentations, on Tuesday, March 20 and Sunday, March 25 will also bring very prominent memhers of the North American Jewish community to us. Call the SJCC (798-9818, ext. 263) for more information.

Author Richard Teleky to read from prize-winning book

By Sharon Abron Drache

The end of November 1999 is etched in Richard Teleky's memory. His particular point of view of the Holocaust won for him the prestigious Hadassah-WIZO literary award, the Ribalow liction prize, for his novel, The Paris Years of Rosie Kamin.

Teleky's literary path parallels that of US literary lion, the late Edmund Wilson, who began learning the Hungarian language as an adult. Teleky went one step further, not only learning Hungarian, but also appropriating for himself a persona (both in writing and in lifestyle) which most native Americans sharing his distanced ethnicity (hc is a third generation Hungarian-American) have preferred to abandon. But, letting go is not Teleky's style. Perhaps this is what makes him more Canadian than American. While he did his undergraduate work at Case Western Reserve in Cleveland, he decided to move to Canada in 1968, subsequently obtaining his masters and doctorate degrees in English Literature from the University of Toronto.

In addition to his awardwinning The Paris Years of Rosie Komin. Teleky has also written short fiction. Goodnight Sweetheart and Other Stories and Hungarian Rhapsodies, essays on ethnicity, identity and culture.

You could say Richard Teleky is obsessed by ethnicity, if upon reading his work you did not immediately also discover an effortless warm and challenging need to both probe and enshrine the past, hefore moving on. The moving on aspect in Teleky's work initiates a unique creative tension.

In The Paris Years of Rosie Komin, the protagonist is both Jewish and female. Like most successful male writers, Teleky enjoys exploring and imagining how the female mind, body and spirit tick. Years of teaching creative writing at York Universiv and 15 years of editing at Oxford University Press have nut him in tune with the words of many other writers. Among the poets Teleky has edited are: Pat Lanc. P.K. Page and Miriam Waddington. He also jump-started the ethnic short story series, published by Oxford University Press, paying tribute to Canada's diverse cultural mosaic.

The Oxford Jewish stories were guest edited by Miriam Waddington who worked with Teleky, and whom he greatly admires. Teleky edited all Waddington's Oxford books, including her Collected Poems, and Apartment Seven, Essoys Selected and New.

"The other [Teleky is pairticularly fond of the word other) female Jewish writer I admire is the late Adele Wiseman, whom Oxford published when I was still managing editor," says Teleky. "Her Memoirs of a Book Molesting Childhood and Other Essays was part of Oxford's ethnicity scries. I like Jewish women, especially creative Jewish women, and many of my friends are Jews. So it seemed natural to me that the heroine of my novel should be Jewish and female."

The fictional Rosie Kamin is the daughter of Budapest-born Holocaust survivors, Morris and Elza. She is raised in Pittsburgh.

one of three children destined to experience their parents' wartime legacy of pain from a respectful distance. Rosie and her sister Deb have different approaches for licking their wounds. Here Teleky gets full fictional marks. The two daughters are as different as any two sisters can be; Deb in New York, a compulsive contest risk taker, who is forever buying the opportunity to win a trip to somewhere exotic in the world, and Rosie, who takes on the 19th Arrondissement of Paris as if it were Oswiecim (Auschwitz) in Poland. Not the real Paris, like not the real Oswiecim stands as a linking metaphor for the Paris suburb, which not-so-innocently hides everything, much as the agricultural town of Oswiecim functioned as a cover for the crematoria of Auschwitz in the mid 1940s.

Interviewed in his York University office in early February, Teleky talks about winning Ribalow. The Ribalow family and American Hadassah-WIZO, who cosponsor the literary prize. invite previous winners to the annual award-presentation. The highlight for Teleky at his crowning moment was when Anne Roiphe, a previous Ribalow winner, gave the keynote adddress about The Poris Yeors of Rosie Kamin. As soon as Roiphe concluded, an elderly Jewish woman came up to Teleky and said "Do you know what beshert [destiny] means? ... this novel is your beshert ..."

"This was true," Teleky affirms. "Many of my associations growing up in Cleveland were with Jews, not only friends but leachers. My first piano teacher escaped from Germany to New York with her husband in 1938. He became first violinist in the Cleveland Orchestra. So many of my close friends have Holocaust connections. It was my "beshert" to write a novel about the Holocaust.

"I made a conscious decision to write about the Holocaust via indirection—every step of the way I feared opportunism, the making of an emotional point which the writer has not earned. I also wished to look at the issue of a reverse immigration pattern of a young Jewish woman mov-

Kaminsky isn't joking. As president of Malkam Consultants Ltd., a cross-cultural training company specializing in developing customized training programs to educate immigrants and travelling professionals on the language and customs of their new home, she has become an expert in the customs and culture of other countries.

Most impressive is its president and founder, Laraine Kaminsky. Attractive, smart, savvy, energetic, she is also very passionate about what she does. # J-Date's Rabbi Goldstein headlines Sunday's program

By Jonathan Baker

Connect@Ottawa, the young leadership conference being held from March 30 to April 1 at the Château Laurier, promises to have something for everyone in attendance.

Whether your interest is religious, political, social or spiritual, the topics covered during Connect@Ottawa are sure to attract attention. Case in point: Sunday's keynote speaker Rabbi Niles Goldstein.

Rabbi Goldstein is the founding member of The New Shul in New York City's Greenwich Village.

Jewish mysticism and spirituality and has served on the faculty of New York University and the Hebrew Union College - Jewish Institute of Religion, but his talents extend beyond the academic world.

Goldstein was the voice behind "Ask the Rabbi" on the Microsoft Network and can now be reached at "Ask Rabbi Goldstein" at www.ifaith.com.

He has edited Spiritual Manifestos: Visions far

He lectures widely on America fram Young Spiritual Leaders of Many Faiths and was co-editor on Duties of the Soul: The Rale of Commandments in Liberal Judaism.

His essays and poetry have appeared in Newsweek and many other publications and he has written three books.

His most recent book. G-D At The Edge - Searching far the Divine in Uncomfortable and Unexpected Places, is devoted to self discovery, personal Renewed Religious Life in determination and understanding and finding God's presence in our lives.

Aside from being rabbi writer and spiritual adviser Goldstein is on the board of I-Date - the largest database of eligible Jewish singles in the world.

Established in 1997, J-Date offers the best in the online dating industry with a 50/50 male to female ratio and gives single Jewish adults the chance to meet in a non-threatening "e"-environment.

Jewish adults from around the globe can converse, exchange information - including pictures and addresses - all without leaving the comfort and security of their own homes.

And J-Date has "e"relationship experts giving their two cents worth about love and romance.

Haman unmasked at the University Connection

One day a king got drunk, killed his wife and found a new queen and shortly thereafter the queen saved her family and friends from the hand of the king's wicked Prime

A brief synopsis of the story of Purim it may be, but that is not a hard thing to do. What is much more difficult, and indeed much more exciting, is to delve into the depths of the texts and unmask the story behind the story. What exactly was the political climate like at the time? What were the motivations behind all of the king's actions and his advisers'

These and other questions were addressed at the "University Connection," a new JET class designed specifically for university students.

Every Thursday night, for the past six weeks, a group of university students has gathered in the Soloway JCC to join JET's Rabbi Dovid Lewin as he led them through the text of Megilas Esther verse by verse, discussing each phrase from a historical, political and emotional perspective.

While not everyone had prior experience in the study of texts, the class proved quite successful as the timely and fascinating in and the students will topic was of interest to all. Indeed, many of the students commented that they had "never really understood the Megilah in this way" and this year Purim will be like never before.

Although Purim may mark the end of the winter, for the "University Connection" it is only a beginning. The class will continue through March and into April as the students venture to take an indepth look at the Pesach Haggadah, the most commented upon piece of Jewish literature. While every year, several "mouth watering" commentaries of the haggadah are published, Rabbi Lewattempt to "whet their appetites" long before they will consume any matzo.

Circumcision – Questioning a cutting-edge practice

For us, the primary concern is to fight this issue with all our vigour. To do so, we must be sure of our ground. For openers, we must be sure of our own stance on this.

To be blunt, the human rights issue is pure bogus. The next thing we will hear is that parents are not allowed to criticize their children because it is a violation of their human right not to be bothered. Parents have the responsibility to raise their children and, when necessary, to discipline them. Jewish parents have the responsibility to enter their children into the covenantal faith community. It is their duty, and the children's "right" to have parents who educate them in this manner. If anything, it is by denying them their heritage and their covenant that parents infringe on the child's rights.

A child would be within its rights to complain to parents who refused circumcision and left it to the child to do so as an adult. "Why did you let this become a traumatic event for me to endure later on, when it could have been done on the eighth day, with minimal pain, and with me unaware?" would be a legitimate and powerful argument of the child denied circumcision early on.

Beyond human rights, it is vital to fully comprehend what is the meaning of circumcision. In this regard, I share with you, in somewhat revised form, my response to the original question.

Does God relish the sexual mutiliation of children through the ritual of circumcision? No, no, a thousand times no

With no dearth of negativity the question asks not only about God's directive, but also about God's apparent enjoyment of our pain. Do we not circumcise our children because God so ordained? Yes, that is the reason and the basis. But what about the sexual mutilation? How can we be so sure that God does not relish this?

Because in the same Torah (Five Books of Moses) that prescribes circumcision, there are strict regulations forbidding even a simple cut on the face of a person as a sign of mourning (Deuteronomy, 14:1), a practice in which other cultures engaged. We are forbidden to injure, inflict damage or cut into all people, including ourselves.

The first person circumcised, Abraham, was advanced in years when he was circumcised. That was the exception. Subsequent to Abraham and Yishmael, circumcision was to take place at the earliest possible time, at eight days. Whatever arguments have been made by ethicists who seem silent concerning even late term abortion and the excruciating pain this inflicts, it is clear that the earlier the circumcision, the less painful.

Another matter is certain. Were we not told by God to circumcise our male children, we would not be allowed to do so. But since God told us to do so, there must be a compelling reason. That is what has guided Jews throughout the generations, even when circumcision made them even more vulnerable to the rampaging death squads.

The general wisdom regarding circumcision, derived from the wide array of suggested reasons for the practice, is that it speaks to the sanctity of the sexual relationship and its procreative potential. Judaism has always endorsed sexual expression as the unique language of marriage. It perceives sexual union to be the most sacred human expression.

The reality that the organ which experiences and proffers pleasure simultaneous with its generating posterity is imprinted with a Godly covenant serves to indelibity mark it as a most sacred part of the body. God relishes sanctity and relishes even more our ennobling sex as a sacred, Godly expression and experience. That is what God relishes.

It should be clear that with the conscious awareness of this Godly imprint, one is less likely to abuse one's wife, or to in any other way use this volatile part of the human anatomy inappropriately.

That a Judaic precept which goes beyond human rights, embraces what is humanly and religiously right and is suffused with such ultimate concern for the sanctity of life and the holiness of sex should be branded as an abuse of human rights is in itself an abuse, if not a disgrace.

Myra Aronson's moving on Dear Editor.

Moving on is not the easiest thing to do, but when a great editor chooses to do so, she must have a very good reason. During Myra Aronson's eight-year tenure, I worked with her as a feature writer for only six months. She was efficient, warm and welcoming, and very much in control. Her editorial judgment was superb. But what most impressed me was Myra's dedication and enthusiasm, always snappy in her assessment of a situation – so sure of herself and her vision for the Ottawa Jewish Bulletin on which she has left her own unique stamp.

Money doesn't grow on trees Trees grow on money

If you can't see the forest for the trees in Israel, you're probably looking straight into one of many precious JNF forests gracing the land. And while money doesn't grow on trees, the very existence of these vital plants is proof positive that trees, whole forests of them, do grow on money ... money donated to JNF by Jews around the Diaspora to ensure an Israel that is lush, green and capable of competing with world economies.

There is no finer way to mark an occasion or remember someone special than by purchasing a tree from JNF. Get well ... congratulations ... condoiences ... are iust a few of the reasons to purchase/plant a tree or trees in Israel. That's because there really is no better living link between you and the land of Israel. A tree is much more than an object of beauty planted in groves, woods and forests. A tree, your tree, represents your roots in your land. When you plant a tree in Israel, you are saying more than mere words can ever say ... you are actually identifying with Israel and, like your tree, you are bringing new life to the land.

Rabbi Bulka's Answers to Questions of the Spirit soars to success

By Diane Koven

For those of us who are regular readers of the "Ask the Religion Experts" feature in the Ottawa Citizen and often wish we had clipped out one of Rathbi Reuven Bulka's answers, an easy solution is at hand. The author himself has compiled a hook of "clippings", answers to many of life's challenges and concerns.

Rabhi Bulka's latest hook, Answers to Questions of the Spirit, is the result of his desire to help the Ottawa Regional Cancer Centre. A memher of the Centre's hoard for several years, he has seen first hand the exellent work that is done there. Being a spiritual leader, Bulka has counselled many people through the trauma of cancer diagnoses and treatment. Unfortunately, nohody is immune to illness and, when it struck within his own family, Bulka was grateful for the kindness and earing that he and his wife experienced at the Centre.

"I wanted to do something tangihle for the Centre," he says, "in gratitude for their life-saving work, not only with Naomi, but with so many others."

Bulka discussed his idea for the hook with Jim Orban of the Ottawa Citizen, then chair of the board of the Ottawa Regional Cancer Centre, Orban, in turn, took the idea to Citizen publisher Russell Mills who readily agreed to publish it. The result is a compilation of articles covering a wide range of topics under headings such as "Life and Death", "Here and the Hereafter" and "This Thing Called Rebigion".

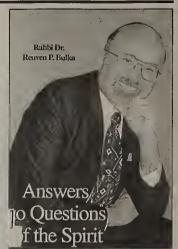

According to Mills, Bulka's views "are a blend of the wisdom that results from his extensive rabbinical and academic training and the solidly grounded common sense that comes from serving a congregation".

The book is written from a Jewish perspective yet, as Bulka points out in its introduction, he has "always thought of Judaism as a particular religious expression and way of life, but with a universal message". It is his hope that all readers will gain some insight from reading it and that the answers will help people deal with some of life's chal-

The book is being sold only in Ottawa and all proceeds are being donated to the Ottawa Regional Cancer Centre Foundation. The few copies still available can be found at local bookstores and through the Machzikei Hadas synagogue office.

"It's not only the language you need for your job. It's the language you need to maintain all the things around your joh; the social things at work, the 'team' talk, presentations, asking supervisors for help, negotiating for something you need. People are hired traditionally for their technical competence but it's those other skills that non-native speakers don't have. They don't have the language around that and those are the things our company has specialized in." she says

Kaminsky's company is now made up of 10 full-time staff and 40 to 50 consultants. And her work comes to her from all over the world. The region Malkam is often ealled upon for cross-cultural work is Asia. Malkam recently received a request to work with a Montreal-based company which is bringing in developers from Bulgaria. Malkam also works with an Israel-based and an Indiabased company. Their network is now a global one.

'To do this work, I believe you've got to have the three 'Hs'," says its president. "You've got to have the Head, to know what you're talking about, because it's not an easy field. We're not selling a widget. You've got to have the Heart, the passion, to truly understand and believe in what you're doing. And you've got to have the Hand, the capacity to do the work." She looks for the same three 'Hs' when she hand nicks her staff.

One hand-picked staffperson is her youngest child. 24-year-old Adam who, with a degree in Economics, graduated last year from Syracuse University with a Masters in Broadcast Journalism. He does business development writing and research for Malkam.

"It's great, As a feminist, I'm so pleased to have a son working for a mother," she smiles. "It's not nearly as acceptable as a son working for a father, right?"

Kaminsky's children figure prominently in her business life. In fact, the name Malkam is a combination of her name, her sons' names (Matthew and Adam) and her daughter's name (Kathryn). Her children have not only contributed to the company name, they also offer their expertise as business advisers. Tbirty-year-old Matthew is a chartered financial analyst working as a financial consultant for Deloitte's in New York City, Kathryn, 28, is a chartered accountant working as a manager for PriceWaterhouseCoopers Inc., also in New York.

Kaminsky says the most difficult part of growing her business has been transforming herself from teacher into businesswoman, and managing the growth process. She had no vision, she claims; it was all evolutionary. And it's all been about being able to multi-task and change hats constantly. And not getting much sleep in the process.

"It's not easy. I don't get a lot of sleep - four hours, she says. "And I don't think it's getting any easier for women. I don't know if it's getting any easier for my daughter. I think it's always going to be a struggle.

'We have to socialize society differently. It's not a man's issue. It's a gender issue. It's a people issue. And it's a support issue. It's a time issue. It's a financial issue.

"How do I balance? I love what I do, but it consumes my life.'

Kaminsky laughs that she's still married. She only started the business when her children were grown. And so now, while many of her peers are slowing down, this dynamic 53-year-old is just starting to rev up the motors. She's out of kilter with many women her age. And any time she has "for herself" is spent on business-associated activities. Her trips - and she travels a lot - are also research-oriented. That's when she really gets to observe the culture of other countries. She and her husband combine their liking for outdoor activities with her business requirements. Last year they took a cycling trip from Ho Chi Min City to Hanoi in Vietnam, and then went on a cycling trip through Denmark. They're my identity," she says. "It's also a part of my cultural identity; it's a part of my story. I'm a Jewish immigrant from South Africa and when I tell people my story, I don't hide anything.

Kaminsky can't tell you how she got to be so successful; how, really, she got to this point in time.

"I don't know in retrospect how I did it. I had chutzpah? I don't know. I just did it. I didn't plan it. I just did it "

OMJS hunts for treasures of Jewish memorabilia

and Martha Segal

In December, the Ottawa Modern Jewish School held an OMJS Family Treasures Day, an event designed for the school's families to share and explore their common lewish heritage.

The children had been asked to go on a treasure hunt with their parents to find the oldest Jewish object in their homes and to leam ahout the history and significance of the object. Grandparents, aunts and uncles could also provide information on how the object came to be considered a "treasure" by the family. No one was prepared for the variety and beauty of the objects or for the richness and magic of the stories and tradition they would recount

As families arrived with their treasures, photographs were taken of each object against a background of colourful silk fabrics for a Family Treasures Book to be compiled by the students and their teachers. Parents filled out cards providing information on origin and significance, the first step in creating an annotated map showing the origins of the OMJS Jewish Treasures.

Not all families were able to locate "old" treasures because of a rushed emigration from Europe or the Middle East or grandparent caretakers. The old and new Jewish treasures included chanukiahs, candlesticks, kiddush cups, a samovar, matzah covers, a miniature Torah, an ancient ring and a High Holiday siddur with an ornately decorated silverplated cover.

The items were placed on a large table and the students recounted their tales of how their artifact became a family treasure. Shaina Lipsey's story about an old siddur lost by a Jewish family only to be found several generations later by their descendants was a moving introduction to the treasures presented. Emotions ran high as the tales, memories and traditions from previous generations were shared, creating a feeling of connection.

Following the presentation, parents engaged in a discussion on the importance of Jewish objects and symbols within the family ly traditions.

important part of the traditions passed on to future generations.

The children created beautiful frames for the photographs of their treasures at the arts and crafts table and played archaeologist as they examined and interpreted the assortment of ancient and modern artifacts. They also discussed theories on the significance and use of the treasures within the Jewish family and were able to see the value and importance of documenting the stories associated with their family treasure and passing on their Jewish traditions. Everyone gained a broader understanding of and respect for the richness and variety of fami-

He continues chatting in the present as if he received the award only yesterday, and not in November 1999. He says that Anne Roiphe, author of Loving Kindness" was drawn by the fact that the novel is a fable". Her remark was related to the cutting up of a hlouse to make a yellow star at the end of the novel ... Teleky does not elaborate. But the fable rests with the yellow star's superimposed triangles, the symbol appropriated by the Nazis to identify Jews during the Holocaust. The non-Jewish writer and the two sisters Teleky writes ahout, Rosie and Deb, are also part of a triangle - the narrator himself as other, the hidden author, Richard

SPRING AND SUMMER JEWISH FESTIVALS

PURIM

March 9, 2001, 14th of Adar 5761

The holiday of Purim, as described in the Megillal Esther – the scroll of Esther – involves a plot by wicked Haman against the Jews and his eventual defeat and demise through the efforts of Mordechai and Queen Esther. A minor holiday, Purim is historic in origin. It is celebrated with much joy and revelry. Traditionally, children and adults dress in costume and a carnival atmosphere prevails with parades and festivities. The Book of Esther is read and children twirl noisemakers known as groggers to "blot oui" Haman's name whenever it is read.

PESACH/PASSOVER

April 8 – 15, 2001 (1st Seder April 7) 14/15th of Nisan 5761

The Hebrew month of Nisan ushers in springtime as Passover recalls the deliverance of Jews from Egyptian slavery. Thus, Passover celebrates liheration and religious freedom as it draws families and friends together to contemplate the value of a meaningful, free existence. Every year on the night of the full moon, in the month of Nisan (March – April), Jews around the world enter into a sacred time at a Seder table as the Exodus from Egypt is told. The Intricate ritual of the Seder is explained in the Haggadah, Matzoh and other special foods are eaten at the meal. Dietary regulations governing Passover forhid the ownership and consumption of leavened products.

YOM HASHOAH

April 20, 2001 27th of Nisan 5761

A recent addition to the Jewish calendar, Holocaust Memorial Day includes rituals, liturgy, and customs that commemorate the tragedy that hefell the Jewish people during WWII and expresses the hope that such calamity will never happen again.

YOM HA'ATZMAUT

April 28, 2001

5th of Iyar 5761

Israel Independence Day celebrates the founding of the State of Israel in 1948. In Israel It is celebrated with military parades, concerts, speeches, and fireworks. In Canada festivities involve a celebration of Israel's music, dance, and cultural achievements.

LAG B'OMER

May 11, 2001

18th of 1yar 5761

The seven weeks between Passover and Shavuot are known as the days of counting the Omer.

These seven weeks are considered a time of semi-mourning because tradition tells us that Rabbi Akiva's students died from a plague. On the 33rd ("lamed" + "gimmel" equals 33) day of the Omer, the plague ceased, and happy occasions were once again permitted. On this day families hold picnics and other outdoor activities.

SHAVUOT

May 28, 29, 2001 6th and 7th of Siyan 5761

TO CELEBRATE

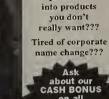

at the SJCC

Shavuot means "weeks," signifying that this festival is celebrated seven weeks after Passaver

This major holiday celebrates the sacred moment on Mount Sinai when Moses received the Torah. In ancient times, Shavuot was observed by a pilgrimage to the Temple bringing the first fruits for which Israel is known barley, wheat, grapes, figs, pomegranates, olives, dates and honey. Feasting is a part of Shavuot and dairy foods are favoured, because Torah is as sweet as honey and as nourishing as milk to those who study it and live according to its precents.

New SJCC TheatreWorks production in full swing

The Theatre Department of the Cleveland Indians. Soloway Jewish Community Centre (SICC) is thrilled to tell you about its brand new production coming this June, marking the return of SJCC TheatreWorks!

We will be staging a new, nonmusical play, called Hardball, which is based on the true story of Hank Kaner, Kaner was an aspiring minor league pitcher from a small Midwest town, who in 1922 had to choose between his Orthodox lewish faith and a contract with the Hardball is a heart-warming story about cleaving to what one values and believes in, despite the promise of fame and fortune. The play offers insight into our North American Jewish heritage in the early 20th century and will appeal

The play was written by Dean B. Kaner, grandson of Hank, the lead character in the play. Other works of his include The Boys of Winter, which was produced in August by Howard Baldwin, who also produced the film Mystery, Alaska starring Burt Reynolds.

Auditions will be held on March 18, 19 and 20. There are approximately 18 roles to fill and, while the cast will mostly consist of people aged 12 - 25, there are some very important older adult roles that need to be filled as well.

For more information on auditions or to book a time slot, please call Michael Torontow, Theatre Arts Manager, at 798-9818, ext. 231.

CAREER OPPORTUNIT

Marketing & Publicity Manager Soloway Jewish Community Centre

This challenging, hands-on role will appeal to an extremely motivated, highly creative individual who wants to be part of a dynamic and hard working team.

As the SJCC's Marketing & Publicity Manager, you will be responsible for both marketing membership and publicizing the SJCC's varied roster of programs and special events. Your marketing savvy, coupled with your creative acumen and exemplary writing and editing skills, will enable you to raise the profile of the SJCC within the Jewish and extended community in Ottawa. You must be a skilled communicator with the ability to problem-solve and liaise with denartmental managers, staff and volunteers.

If you have the vision, passion and commitment required to meet the challenges of this position, please send your résumé either by fax or e-mail by March 16, 2001 to the attention of:

Linda Kerzner, President & COO of the SJCC 798-9839 (fax) or !kerzner@jecottawa.com

Yiddishkeit Part 2: Enjoying Yiddish on the Web

In the February 19 column, I discussed the Mendele website, the acknowledged web centre for Yiddish scholarship. Here is material that is more easily accessible to those of us whose Yiddish is rudimentary, at best.

Far Unz, di Prosten Yidden -Viddishkeit for the rest of us

Avivale's Yiddish Page is an entry point for the rest of us, a fun site (http://www.starkman.com/aviva/yiddish.html). Currently, it starts out with the lyrics of a Yiddish Jingle for a commonly used household product of amolegeh tsait (times past), jokes, stories and song lyrics that include Yiddish versions of Pesach songs. Avivale's strength is its two long lists of links. The first is a sub-divided and annotated list of Yiddish links around the world – very useful and with a wider scope than the Mendele link list. This is an excellent source for Yiddish literature (see helow). The second list is a set of links to academic programs for Yiddish language courses and Yiddish studies.

'S'iz a m'chaye - Pleasures of Yiddish Lit

From the latter part of the 19th century, a written Yiddish literary culture developed in Eastern Europe and North America, with stories, novels, poems, theatre, movies, radio, and recordings. A brief summary of this development is available at http://www.bergen.org/AAST/projects/Yiddish/English/literature.html.

One man, Sholem-Yankev Ahramovich (1836-1917) is the "zaydeh" of our secular literature and his Mendele Macher Seforim – Mendel, the book peddler – is the first popular character of our cultural renaissance. But it is another writer, who took the name Shalom Aleichem, who is the best known and loved creator of Yiddish literature.

The Shalom Aleichem website was established by presentday members of his family (http://www.sholom-aleichem. org/). The true Shalom Aleichem, presented on this site through family letters, essays, and stories mixes a somewhat irreverent approach to the accepted social order with tart insight into human realities, a formula that has continued, to this day, as the mainstream of Jewish humour.

His Tevyeh the Milkman is a far cry from the sanitized schmaltz of Fiddler on the Roof. Tevyeh is a man of faith, but deeply feels the injustices and suffering of everyday life. Like Abraham, he is willing to conduct a taineh, a questioning of God, as to why, in His mercy, He still allows life to be so hard, and, sometimes, unjust, for so many people.

I recommend you start with the essay on Zionism on the home page and the story "Sweets for Purim", accessible under "Translations" after you click on the link "Enter the Network". Add to these the recovered Victrola recording of Shalom Aleichem himself reading two ahridged stories (http://www.yiddishvoice.com/#sholom-aleichem). If you were not already hooked, these should make you a Shalom Aleichem fan.

Falk Zolf's autobiography, On Foreign Soil, will gain recognition as a classic of the genre produced in Canada and (in its print edition, which is a hybrid of both Yiddish and English) could well become a serious candidate for the Governor General's literary award for translation. The web version of volume one, originally published in the Winnipeg Yiddish newspaper, Yiddisher Vort, in the mid-1940s, is a wholly English version of the new translation by Martin Green (http://www.onforeignsoil.com – click the link "Can I see an English translation?").

Falk Zolf, the father of Leibel (Larry) Zolf, was a poorly paid melamed in the Winnipeg Yiddish-speaking community. At the time of the wiping out of the shtetls of Eastern Europe, Falk Zolf undertook to defy the Holocaust by an act of creative memory – to tell the story of his people, as epitomized in his own life. He creates an inner biography of the shtetl intellectual, a bright yeshivah bocher, who is drawn into the clash between traditionalism and secular modernism and then witnesses the first waves of physical destruction that completed this cultural uprooting – war, revolution and the Soviet regime (1914-1926). A remarkable work. I can't wait until the next volume appears, which tells the story of Zolf's life, and disappointments, in Canada!

A doodeleh - finally, a little music!

Music has heen at the forefront of the contemporary Yiddish revival. Ari Davidow's Klezmer Shack (http://www. klezmershack.com/) is the premium entry point for this fun part of our heritage. It has discussions, hehind the scenes material on various groups, reviews of newly available music and links to sites where you can sample audio clips.

To my readers, the dedicated Yiddishists and the nihhlers and noshers alike, zol'stu mehren — may you thrive and multiply, have fun and continue to develop this wonderful heritage. It lives on, because you are there to remember, rediscover and enjoy it!

The fight on behalf of humanity against inhumanity

Humanity: A Moral History of the Twentieth Century By Jonathan Glover. Yale University Press. 464 Pages. $34.95

The superscription in the first pages of this deeply searching book is: "The chief business of twentieth century philosophy is to reckon with twentieth century history."

The "history" referred to here is the "festival of cruelty" - two world wars, the Holocaust, Stalinist terror, Hiroshima, Mao Tze Tung's Chinese torture gallery, Serbian-Croat-Bosnian barharism, Cambodian and Rwandan genocide, and the case of My Lai - which has dominated the last century.

Into this quagmire of calculated inhumanity, King's College (London, England) philosopher and ethicist, Jonathan Glover, has plunged deeply in order to extract some understanding of the why and wherefore men have engaged in the unprecedented atrocities of our dark era.

Some of the answers he provides in this atlas of human depravity will annoy, disquiet and perhaps even enrage the thoughtful reader. Even admirers of Glover's keen and analytical mind will fault the author for one glaring weakness in his ethical system – his anachronistic habit of judging events of yesteryear by the quiet and serene reasoning of today.

The key to Glover's thesis is the assertion that distancing onesell physically from the victim has led to a callousness which has sanctioned the killing of ordinary citizens, as distinct from soldiers, in this past century. It began, he holds, with the blockade imposed by Britain against Germany during the First World War. It continued, during the Second World War, with the British "area bombing" of German civilian targets such as Dresden. This assault upon citizens paved the way for the atomic destruction of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Distance, of course, is not the only ingredient in the psychological make-up of those who ordered suicidal rands by soldiers against enemy positions, who gassed millions of Jews and others in concentration camps, who dispatched countless other millions to die in the Gulag archipelago, who evacuated one third of the Cambodian people to perish in the killing fields, and who stirred up Rwandans to exterminate Tutsis.

Other factors include tribalism, nationalism, political entanglements, military doctrines, miscues, and false pride. More than a hundred pages of Glover's essay are devoted to the First World War. The author suggests only half seriously that had Gavrilo Princeps failed in his attempt to assassinate the archduke in Sarajevo, the world might have heen spared the horrors of Verdun and the battle of the Somme.

The drift into that war occurred because of a crazy quilt pattern of treaties, mobilization strategies, policical misinterpretations, polocices. The result was the appalling bloodletting that continued for four years until 1918.

Glover does extract a positive note from that experience. The Kennedy administration read the lessons of the First World War and applied them to the Cuban missile crisis of 1962. Both the president and many of his advisors had read Barhara Tuch-

Reviewed by Arnold Ages

man's The Guns of August and appreciated how Europe in 1914 had plunged willynilly into a war which could have been avoided. The result in the president's war room in 1962 and in Khruschev's office (his memories of suffering in the Second World War were very sharp) was an appreciation of the somber consequences of a prospective nuclear exchange and this led to a deescalation of the rhetoric on both sides. The Americans and Russians had slid out of Stalin killed more Russians than all the soldiers who died during the First World War What was there in the architecture of the Soviet Union that encouraged such bestial practices as the starvation of the Ukrainians, the annihilation of the kulags(middle class farmers), the imprisonment, deportation and death of millions of Soviet citizens, many of them fervent communists? The author uses the term "consequentialism" to describe the syndrome which infected Soviet society during the dark days of Stalinist hegemony. The two main elements in the Soviet system were uncritical adherence to the party line and fear. Truth had no role in the political dialectic: truth was what Stalin dictated. Deviation from his truth was punishable by death.

How did intelligent, sane and responsible men harden themselves to look aside while friends, neighbours and comrades in the Party itself were dispatched by the thousands and millions to die in obscurity? Answer – visceral fear so intense that moral sensors were voluntarity extinguished.

Glover recounts the story of a speech given by Stalin at the end of which vigorous applause exploded. The applause continued unabated because no one wished to be the first to stop applauding. Finally, after ten minutes of hand clapping, one individual stopped and sat down. He was immediately arrested, interrogated and manhandled. He got away easily, with a warming never to be the first to stop applauding Stalin.

One fascinating vignette in Glover's dissection of Soviet tyranny pivots on the career of Bukharin, an old apparachik who fell out of put on one of the many show trials. Although he had formerly subscribed to the "ruthless consequentialism" of Stalinist ideas and had written in support of the cruel treatment of class enemies, Bukharin was a quirky individualist who refused initially to subscribe to the rote confessions expected of all the accused. In the end, however, for reasons which until today are not clear (threats to his family are strong possibilities) he confessed, albeit in an indirect way, to his "crimes." He suffered the same fate as thousands of other loyal supporters of Stalin who were caught up in the riptide of Stalinist terror.

Those who executed Stalin's orders had no qualms about the moral rectitude of their behaviour. Here is the testimony of one executioner: "With the rest of my generation 1 firmly believed that the ends justified the means. Our great goal was the universal triumph of communism, and for the sake of that goal everything was permissible - to lie, to steal, to destroy, hundreds of thousands and even millions of people, all those who were hindering our work or who could hinder it, everyone who stood in the way. And to hesitate or doubt about all this was to give in to an 'intellectual squeamishness' and 'stunid liberalism', the attribute of people who could 'not see the forest for the trees'...With the others, I emptied out the old folks' storage chests, stopping my ears to the children's crying and the women's wails."

One of the elements in the twentieth century's "Festival of Cruelty" is what the author calls the "cold joke." Glover reports on the sardonic use of humour used by Stalin, Hitler, Mao Tze Tung and their subalterns as they referred to the torture and murder of millions of those

Elaborate or informal, brunch works for 24 as easily as for four

Brunch is a great way to catch up with old friends or an informal way of entertaining new ones. Brunch works for 24 as easily as for four. Just add more coffee, more bagels, more orange juice and another cake and you're set. It doesn't have to be for a special occasion and it's a more relaxed atmosphere than a dinner party.

You can get as elaborate as you like, from bagels, lox and cream cheese to soufflés. Add some muffins, salads, fruit flans or coffee cakes, and you have a feast!

Roasted Vegetable Hash with Poached Eggs

- Hash.
- I then olive oil
- 4 potatoes, diced
- I sweet potato, diced
- 1 onion, diced
- 3 cloves garlic, chopped
- 2 zucchini, dieed
- I yellow squash, diced 2 tomatoes, seeded and diced
- 2 dashes Worcestershire sauce
- 2 tbsp hot pepper sauce
- 1/4 eup chopped fresh basil
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper

Poached Eggs:

6 cups water

1 tablespoon white wine vinegar

12 eggs

For hash: Heat olive oil in a very large frying pan until very hot. Add potatoes and sweet potatoes and cook until well browned, 4 to 5 minutes. Add onion and garlie and sauté 4-5 minutes. Add zucchini and yellow squash and sauté until tender-erisp, 3 to 4 minutes. Add tomatoes and toss with the vegetables. Season with Worcestershire sauce, hot pepper sauce, basil, salt and pepper and toss well. Keep warm while poaching the eggs.

in a large pan with straight sides. Break the eggs into a cup one at a time and gently add them into the water. Poach for 4 to 5 minutes, or until yolk is nearly cooked. Remove from pan with a slotted spoon to drain the liquid.

Divide the hash among 6 plates. Top each serving with 2 poached eggs. Serve warm, with hot sauce on the side. Serves 6

Note: You can make the hash the night before and heat it up in the morning while poaching the eggs. Have hot sauce on hand to serve as an accompaniment.

Fruit Salad with Honey Yogurt Dressing

Dressing:

1 1/2 cups plain non-fat yogurt

1/4 cup icing sugar

1/3 cup honey Dash vanilla extract

1/2 tsp ground ginger

1/2 tsp ground allspice

Pinch ground cinnamon 1 tsp chopped fresh mint

Fruit Salad:

I pint strawberries, hulled and quartered

- small cantaloupe, peeled and diced
- I small pineapple, peeled and diced
- pint blueberries
- 2 mangoes, peeled and diced
- 2 papayas, peeled and diced

1/2 cup toasted almonds

Dressing: Combine yogurt, icing sugar and honey in a bowl, mixing well. Add vanilla extract, ginger, allspice, cinnamon and mint and mix well. Set aside.

For the salad: Place the fruit in a bowl and toss to mix. Add dressing and mix well. Place in refrigerator until ready to serve. Top with toasted almonds just before serving. Serves 6.

Sour Cream Coffee Cake

- I cup unsalted butter
- 2 1/2 cups sugar 4 eggs
- 1 tbsp vanilla
- 2 tsp finely minced lemon zest
- 4 cups unbleached flour
- 1/2 tsp salt

4 tsp baking powder

Pinch nutmeg 1 3/4 cups sour cream

1/4 cup milk 1/2 cup brown sugar 2 tbsp white sugar

2 tsp cinnamon

1/4 tsp nutmeg

1/2 cup chopped walnuts or pecans

Preheat oven to 350°. Generously grease and flour a 10"

Flour

Cream the butter with the sugar until light and fluffy. Blend in eggs, one at a time, then vanilla and lemon zest. In another bowl, whisk together the flour, salt, baking soda, baking powder and nutmeg. Combine sour cream with milk. Mix well. Fold dry ingredients into batter, alternating with the sour cream/milk mixture to make a smooth batter. Scrape down sides and bottom of mixing bowl while mixing. Combine the brown sugar, white sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg and nuts in a small bowl and set aside.

Spoon one third of batter into pan, toss on one-third of filling, repeat twice more ending with filling on top.

Bake 60 - 70 minutes until tester inserted in centre comes out clean. Cool 30 minutes in pan. Invert onto a plate then reinvert onto the serving plate. Freezes well.

Purim's joyful noise celebrates a tragedy averted

Kid Lit

Deanna Silverman

On Purim I become a child again, if only for a short time. I twirl my gragger and stamp my feet, doing my utmost to blot out Haman's name. With such joyful noises, Jews everywhere celebrate a tragedy averted. Just as Queen Esther stood up for her people thousands of years ago, we, too, noisily defy that old enemy.

But perhaps we are also practicing to defy contemporary enemies. Like the Jews of Persia, the Jews of Israel need the voices of Queen Esther and Mordecai. This Purim, I urge you to join the fray for the hearts and minds of our fellow citizens and our politicians. As the following books exemplify, every voice makes a diffence.

Sammy Spider's First Purim

By Sylvia A. Rouss

Illustrated by Katherine Janus Kahn

Kar-Ben Copies, Inc. 2000 Unpaged Ages 2 - 5

Other than eating, sleeping, learning and eliminating, what is more natural to a young child than making noise? With that thought in mind, author Sylvia A. Rouss once again spins a gentle, if noisy, story about her series hero, Sammy Spider, and his mother who live - you know it with a Jewish family. (Whatever happened to the Jewish mother as balabusta?)

SNIP! SNIP! BANG! CRACK! WHRRR! The sounds of Josh Shapiro and his mother preparing for Purim overwhelm poor little Sammy. Curious as ever, Sammy shricks question after question at his mother only to be told, "Silly little Sammy, spiders don't ... . Spiders spin webs."

This little spider, however, wants a closer look. CRUNCH! He's trapped inside Josh's home-made gragger.

On Purim

By Cathy Goldberg Fishman Illustrated by Melanie W. Hall Atheneum Books For Young Readers Unpaged Ages 5 - 10

Why do we wear masks on Purim? That question lies at the heart of On Purim, a gentle, all inclusive, this is the way-I-and-my-family- celebrate-Purim tale as seen through the eyes of a young girl. Lots of fun and a dash of whimsy, enhanced by colourful illustrations that tease and delight, mark On Purim as a read again holiday favourite.

Integrating craft and activity ideas within the body of her story, author Cathy Goldberg Fishman assigns tasks and roles to each member of the family - our no-name narrator, her parents, grandparents, two older sisters and a younger brother.

They make costumes, act out the story of Purim, bake hamantashen, decorate shalach manot baskets, enjoy a Purim carnival and, finally, parade to synagogue and listen to their costumed rabbi read the Megillah.

Again and again our narrator returns to her starting question. Each time, she postulates a different answer. Symbolically, she incorporates the answers, as well as Purim traditions, in the mask she is making for her Queen Esther costume. The result, a strange and funny mask for "a strange and funny holiday".

But just as Jewish holidays, no matter how jolly, have a serious side so, too, does the author. Quite unexpectedly Fishman ends her tale on a mystical, spiritual note. Father suggests God ".... is hidden in the faith of Mordecai and Esther and in their courage to do the right thing."

Our narrator takes the idea of a hidden God one step further, making it her final answer to the mask question. Although her explanation is lovely and comforting, especially for younger children, middle grade readers might find the analogy somewhat far-fetched. Ah well, nothing like a lively discussion to add to Purim's joyful noises. On Purim and any time, it's a good read.

From my family to yours, we wish you a raucous, funfilled and delicious Purim.

Bishops! Way go,

I joined the queue in the grocery store checkout, and overheard the end of a conversation between the cashier and a former employee.

"I get forty hours a week, guaranteed," said the 20something man to the cashier, "plus time and a half overtime. Benefits, too."

"That's really great," said the cashier. "Good luck, and keep in touch," she called out as he wandered towards the

"It sounds like he was saying something about conditions around here too," I remarked to the cashier.

'You're not kidding," she said. "I don't know how somebody can support a family on the hours and pay we get here. It's a good thing my husband works full time. If he didn't, there's no way we could manage."

She paused, hefore going on.

'Actually, my husband says that when we take everything into account, we probably only break even with my job, if that. It's a good thing my girls are in school now, and don't need daycare any more."

As I left the store, I began to think about Ottawa's prosperous, high tech economy, its soaring housing prices and the two people I had just encountered. Contrary to some stereotypes, they seemed like responsible people who worked at regular jobs to earn the money they needed to ensure that their families' needs were being met. Was there something wrong with the picture of Ottawa portrayed in our daily newspapers, with their reports about the growing number of high-tech millionaires, their fancy houses and their $90,000 SUVs?

I thought about this issue again in early February, when a friend who works as a researcher for the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops sent me a copy of an eightpage letter that the Bishops had sent to all members of Parliament.

The letter, which was subsequently made public, dealt with several challenges facing Canadian society. These included the widening gap between have and have-not Canadians; the increasing number of children living in poverty (20 per cent of all children); the need for fairer taxation measures; the expansion of priority social programs such as home care and pharmacare; using the fiscal surplus to substantially increase aid to debt-ridden countries and looking at ways of forgiving their debt; incentives to reduce greenhouse emissions; and support for the land rights of Aboriginal peoples.

After laying out these issues, the Bishops' letter encouraged our MPs to make the common good and the goal of ending economic exclusion (particularly relating to groups like women, indigenous peoples, newcomers and children) the guiding priority of their political and legislative commitments.

Way to go, Bishops, I thought. If the social agenda hadn't already been on Parliament's workplan, it will certainly be there after our 301 MPs get your letter.

Over the past several years, Ottawa's Jewish community has become much more aware of the existence of poverty in its midst and the need to address this multidimensional problem in some very concrete ways. Much of the credit must be given the people at Jewish Family Services, and to the Vaad Ha'Ir, which established the Kehila Task Force and will soon start to implement its recommendations. There are also some remarkable individual projects, like the Machson Tzvi Hersh charity that collects and distributes used clothing to needy people. These and similarly inspired efforts deserve a hearty

As happy as I am about some of these local efforts, I wonder about our reaction to poverty in the broader (non-Jewish) Canadian community. Why is it, I wonder, that we have to wait for statements made by Catholic Bishops whose concerns, after all, are grounded on commandments that originate in our Torah - instead of those of our own national Jewish leadership? For once, it would be nice to hear some high-profile statements from, for example, bodies representing rabbis or Jewish social workers about the impact of poverty on Canadian society, and the need for Parliament and our provincial legislatures to take action on a priority basis.

In Parshas Shoftim (Deuteronomy XVI, Verse 20), we read the words "Justice, justice shall you follow". Rabbi J.H. Hertz tells us that these passionate words are the keystone of the humane legislation of the Torah and of the demand for social righteousness by our prophets, psalmists and sages. The Jewish concept of justice, says Hertz, by its nature includes our obligation to help the poor and to work for a more equal society.

Yes, the Catholic Bishops have had a lot to say about poverty and inequality. But our Torah compels us to say even more and to ensure that our words get said again and again, until they actually get listened to and acted upon by parliamentarians and others.

perceived as enemies. "In the camp at Majdanek at the end of 1943," writes Glover, "a huge increase in killings was described as a 'harvest festival.' In Treblinka the road to the gas chambers was known as the 'Himmelweg', or road to heaven."

In the rogues gallery explored by Glover, Mao Tze Tung, the Chinese tvrant, occupies a special niche, The history of the communist rule over China and Mao's role has not been documented with the same thoroughness as the communist and Nazi models. Accordingly, Glover's inquiry into the particular Chinese experiment with communism is especially valuable.

Mao, like the Soviet and Nazi homologues, was amoral, ruthless, autocratic and friendless. His implementation of the Great Leap Forward, a violent agricultural collectivization campaign carried out between 1958 and 1962 cost the lives Far from introducing the egalitarian society promised in communist propaganda, Mao created his own mandarinate in Beijing where he housed his own elite Party leaders and en-joved the life of a sybarite.

The Ottawa Jewish Community Foundation is pleased to announce the establishment of The Jewish Youth Library of Ottawa Endowment Fund. The Jewish Youth Library of Ottawa joins a growing list of community institutions and organizations, both large and small, which have opened their own funds in the Foundation to help finance their goals and the future," explains Devora Caytak, co-director of the library," but we need proper funding to make those plans a reality. We are so grateful to the Foundation for its help in giving us vay to build our future."

Devora and her husband. Dr. Joseph Cavtak, know how powerful a vision can be. The Jewish Youth Library of Ottawa will celebrate its 20th anniversary this year and has recently applied to the Vaed He'lr for beneficiery status.

The library has come a long way since the Caytaks founded it in 1981 soon after they arrived in Ottawa. "We knew we wanted to do something to promote Jewish connection and learning in our new city. We thought that a library of books devoted to Jewish life, customs and history would be a very low-key Canadian way for people to connect," recalls Caytak," a native Minnesotan. "A book can be read in the privacy of one's home and sometimes a book can be a very powerful thing."

The library began with a box of books in the basement of the Caytaks' home. Soon, a Jewish Women's Institute was started, offering a variety of Judaic classes. One of its programs was a mom and me class. A Jewish preschool soon followed. "At that time many Jewish families were sending their children to a preschool in a church basement. We thought we could do better by offering Ottawans a quality preschool with a rich Jewish content," Caytak explains.

Programming quickly expanded into other areas. Today, the Jewish Youth Library offers a wide variety of programs for both children and adults. These include, in addition to the preschool and Women's Institute, a summer camp, a Friday Shabbat for Tots drop-in, a Talmud class and a Jewish mysticism class taught by Rabbi Yehoshua Botnick, Shabbatonim, family retreats, open Passover seders and public lectures by distinguished Judaic thinkers. In 1989, the Jewish Youth Library of Ottawa moved from the Caytaks' basement to its own premises at 192 Switzer Avenue. The library's collection of books and tapes continued to expand and its popularity in the community continued to grow. "People from all levels of Jewish observance and knowledge come to us," Caytak notes. "We try to be as open and accessible as possible, and connect with people from where they're at."

The Jewish Youth Library has hig plans for the future. Foremost is the desire to add a rabbi and rebbetzin to its staff to expand its adult education programming and enrich the Judaic content of its preschool. The library would also like to partner with other organizations - offering Judaic programs for seniors at Hillel Lodge and Jewish classes specifically geared to university students, together with the Jewish Students Association.

A renovation and expansion are also major needs. "Our collection is growing at such a pace that we are running out of space," Caytak

"We need to expand our financial base to meet our goals and give the library financial security. Opening a fund in the Foundation is a wonderful way to reach out to the whole

Among the many benefits Caytak cites are the Foundation's well-known donor card program and higher visibility as well as the fact that all Foundation funds are held in perpetuity. "By making a gift to our Foundation fund, our supporters know that they are helping to ensure the future of our Library," she con-

Savannah synagogue, third oldest in America, dates back to 1876

By Diane Koven

For a city with a total Jewish population of only 3,000, Savannah, Georgia has a very well organized Jewish community. Rich in history, the city boasts the third oldest congregation in America, following New York's Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue and the Touro Synagogue in Newport, Rhode Island, Savannah's Congregation Mickve Israel was the first congregation established in the South and is also the oldest congregation now practising Reform Judaism.

In the year 1733, when settlers from England established the Colony of Georgia, a group of 42 Jews of Spanish, Portuguese and German descent arrived by ship and formed the nucleus of what was to become a thriving and ongoing congregation. After meeting in various buildings over the years, in 1876 the congregation built the present synagogue, believed to be the only synagogue of English Gothic architecture in the country. In its museum, one can see photographs, artifacts and letters of historic significance, including the original Torah, written on dcerskin, which was brought with the settlers in 1733.

Savannah also boasts two other active congregations: B'nai Brith Jacob, which is Orthodox, and Agudath Achim Conservative, On a recent visit, I attended services at Agudath Achim and was struck both by the feeling of familiarity and by the particularly southern "twist". The members were warm and friendly and had faces and names that one could find in any congregation in North America. The scrvice was the same, the melodies familiar, When the rabbi spoke, however, I was acutely aware of where I was. He didn't speak about the weekly Torah portion or ahout events in Israel. He spoke of something newsworthy and important to his local congregation - the controversy about whether to continue flying the Confederate flag on public huildings in spite of the great opposition of Georgia's Black community. At the kiddush following services. I listened as people reminisced about their experiences growing up while segregation was still legal and the conversation hrought to life a subject I had only read about before.

In addition to the three synagogues, Savannah has a Glatt Kosher retirement residence known as Buckingham South where, I am told, a visitor could arrange to have a kosher meal. There is also a very large and beautiful Jewish community centre, known as the Jewish ing an indoor pool and other modem facilities. The community centre is closed on Shahbat.

Prior to my visit, I contacted the Jewish Educational Alliance to enquire about "things fewish" in Savannah The person I spoke to strongly suggested that I call Sharon Galin, a local tour guide who specializes in pointing out things of interest to Jewish tourists. Sharon has lived in Savannah for over 40 years. She and her husband Murray live in the heart of the historic district. Their home, in fact, is on the regular tour route and trolleys routinely stop to admire the beautiful porch and ironwork fence. Following a lengthy career as an educator, Sharon decided to study for her tour guide licence so that she could do professionally what she so enjoyed doing for friends and visitors - show them the city she dearly

Meeting Sharon really made my visit to Savannah special. In addition to the Educational Alliance, boast- regular walking tour of historic Savannah, I was invited to join Sharon for synagogue services and we spent most of the day visiting places not on the official tour route

> For history buffs, lovers of warm weather and heautiful scenery, or those simply looking for a new place to explore, Savannah offers a delightful ambience. The historic section of the city, beginning with River Street along the banks of the river, is easy to walk. The city is organized around town squares as in the original plans and can he easily navigated with a city map. Buses and trolley tours take visitors to see such sites as the Juliette Gordon Low House (she founded the Girl Guides of America) and the Mercer House, setting of the film "Midnight in the Garden of Good & Evil."

For anyone travelling south to Florida by car, Savannah is an interesting place to stop. It is also easily accessible by plane and is certainly worth the trip.
